Interior

The industrial location oozes character and natural charm with the sky lighted roof providing an abundance of natural light.

The warehouse has a chequered history with the largest room originally being part of the adjacent school whilst the rest was split into smaller industrial units.

After the area was heavily bombed during the war the whole space was adjoined by the sky lighted roof, hence the untouched Victorian street running through the middle.

The space is complimented by a number of wonderfully textured walls which have naturally dilapidated over the past hundred or so years.

There are also a number of different floors available with parquet, mezzanine and oak boards all represented at various points.

There are a large selection of fantastic props displayed throughout the location.
