Interior

The interiors include a distinctive orange kitchen with original coloured units, vintage bathroom suites, period wallpapers, curtains, furnishings and decorative details that capture the character of a traditional British family home from the 1970s. Multiple reception rooms, hallways, bedrooms and dining areas provide a variety of filming environments, ranging from cosy domestic scenes to nostalgic period drama settings.

The house benefits from spacious rooms, original wood and carpeted flooring, wallpapered feature walls, a piano and numerous untouched details that offer visual depth and authenticity. Suitable for feature films, television dramas, commercials, music videos, fashion editorials and documentary productions requiring a genuine retro domestic environment.

Exterior

The property presents a classic London residential setting with attractive front and rear gardens, offering a versatile backdrop for both contemporary and period productions. The exterior provides an established family-home appearance that can easily represent a range of suburban locations across several decades.

A private patio area and mature garden spaces create opportunities for outdoor scenes, family sequences, lifestyle photography and commercial shoots. The residential surroundings offer a believable everyday London backdrop while maintaining the privacy and flexibility required by production teams.

With on-street parking available and convenient access within Greater London, the location is well suited to film, television, photography and content creation projects seeking a practical, production-friendly base with authentic period character both inside and out.
