Interior

Open plan Victorian pub with eclectic features. Has traditional fireplace surrounded by a 3 piece Chesterfield Suite. Tables and chairs are all random, but all old and traditional pub furniture. The stage area features a dart board, piano and a mural of Bosch's "The Garden of Earthly Delights." The pub also features hangings of taxidermy and a 100 year old Python skin. All bar fonts can be easily removed off of the bar top.

Exterior

The pub is situated in a relatively quiet Central London Street and props up a traditional independent community of shops and residential houses. The building itself features an original frontage of tiles and brick work. There are chained benches that hang off the pub exterior underneath hanging baskets and traditional styled lanterns. Upstairs and round the back there are a series of different levels of large roof terraces that look onto the Shard and the City Scape of London.
