Interior

The property itself dates back to the late 1500s to early 1600s, making it a true Tudor-era home with its characteristic black-and-white timber framing, along with a mix of exposed beams and panelled or painted brickwork. Inside, you'll find numerous charming beams and panelling that add to its historic character. The house features five bedrooms and four bathrooms, spread across the first and second floors, with spacious landings, one of which serves as a home office. On the ground floor, there's a large kitchen with a central island and a range, along with a dining area. The living spaces include a sitting room, a cozy snug, a utility room, a back boot room with a downstairs cloakroom, and a reasonably sized main hallway. Additionally, there's a cellar located under the sitting room.

Exterior

The garden covers about an acre, with flowerbeds, lawns, and large established trees. We also own a 9-acre field across the lane, which adds to the expansive feel of the property. There are several outbuildings as well.
